

Nandini Chirimar has her roots in Jaipur, India; and currently lives in New York. Her works draw inspiration from objects, spaces, maps, relationships and her varying role as an "Indian" woman / mother living in a foreign land. Nandini includes drawing, painting, gold leaf, printmaking, collage and embroidery in her works. She holds a BFA from Cornell University and MFA from the Maryland Institute, College of Art. She also learnt woodblock printing in Japan from Taika Kinoshita. Nandini's works have been widely exhibited internationally.
